NO ROOM FOR LIBRARIANS—Anita Benson, employee of the API Library Reference Department, poses to indicate how crowded it is inside the main library. Anita, a former API student in secretarial training, now works in the Veterinary branch of the college library. Of course she didn't go there because there is literally no standing room for librarians in the main library—but there isn't much walking room there during the regular quarters. Anita is the daughter of Mrs. Billie Benson of Auburn.

1942 Alumnus—

Kelley Is New Architecture Head

Charles M. Kelley, '42, Montgomery, has been named head professor of architecture at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. For the past year he has served as professor of architecture at API.

An Auburn graduate of 1942, he received his master of architecture degree from Harvard University in 1951.

CHARLES KELLEY ... department head

Kelley is a veteran of World War II, during which he served as a naval officer. He is a registered architect and a member of the Alabama chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

In connection with Kelley's appointment, Sam Hurst, dean of the School of Architecture and the Arts said, "By his conviction and the examples of his executed work, Prof. Kelley has distinguished himself within the school and the profession. His appointment completes our administrative team. We move ahead toward a stronger program, not only in architecture, but in building technology, art, music and the dramatic arts as well. Each of these programs will enrich the other and, properly coordinated, will raise the quality of our student product."

"Further, we hope to bring architecture and the arts closer to all our people. The nature of the architect's services and his particular contributions are not yet fully understood at the grass roots. Art as expression and communication has always been a common denominator in the cultural advance of man. To be so it requires not only his passive enjoyment but his active participation in creative work. Through exhibits, clinics, traveling productions and faculty at all levels, we shall work to share the resources of our school with the community and the region. Significant work in this line already is underway."

API Enrollment Again Exceeds 8,000 Mark

Enrollment at API has again exceeded the 8,000 mark with a final registration of 8,069. Of this total approximately 1,700 are co-eds. More than two thousand students are at Auburn for the first time; of this group approximately 1,650 are freshmen; the remainder are transfer students from other colleges and graduate students beginning programs of advanced study at API.

This year's enrollment is somewhat below last year's record 8,410. College officials note several reasons for the slight decrease:

Women's dormitory spaces were all reserved in the early spring, causing an early limitation of co-ed enrollment. All college housing facilities for men were reserved by early July, and no vacant rooms in private homes, dormitories, and boarding houses were listed with the College Housing Coordinator. Registration was then closed to out-of-state applicants, and in-state applicants were required to show evidence of a room reservation before they were permitted to apply for fall registration. Many prospective students walked the streets seeking rooms, but found none and evidently changed their plans.

From these developments grew a widespread impression that there was little need to plan to go to Auburn if advanced arrangements for housing had not been made. But several hundred students with room reservations failed in the summer session to make the grades necessary to remain in college, or failed to clear deficiencies for which they had already been placed on "drop" status in the spring. Thus a number of vacancies were created by the end of August—just two weeks prior to fall registration.

Student deficiencies

College officials express concern over the number of students dropped for academic deficiencies: In June, 1166 students were placed on "drop" status. More than 400 of this group did not return to clear deficiencies; of those who returned approximately 300 failed to clear deficiencies. Thus more than 700 of last year's students were clearly lost from the college program because of academic difficulties. This figure does not include an undetermined but significant number who resigned of their own accord because of scholastic troubles, before they became officially ineligible.

API officials are not particularly concerned about the slight decrease in enrollment occasioned by this loss of students; for campus facilities are overcrowded and many classes are too large for the best welfare of faculty and students. But they are concerned about the effect upon the individual students involved and the loss of potential college graduates to Alabama (which has about 40 per cent fewer college graduates per thousand adult population than the remainder of the nation).

A certain number of failures for various reasons is to be expected, but the

'Ware Teaching Award' Established

The Southern Region of the American Society for Horticultural Science has established the L. M. Ware Distinguished Teaching Award to be given annually to an outstanding professor of horticulture in the South.

The award, $100 and a plaque, is the first of its kind in the horticultural teaching field.

L. M. Ware, '17, head of the horticulture department, API School of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station, proposed the award. "For years I have felt that good teaching has never had the recognition that good research has had," he said. "Promotions have come as a result of research. It seems to me that good teaching is sufficient of itself to justify recognition and promotion."

Each candidate for the award must be an active member of the Southern Region of the American Society for Horticultural Science. He must have taught within the region for ten years, acquired the equivalent of five years of teaching and currently spending at least 25 per cent of his time in teaching.

Each school or college of agriculture in the Southern Region may nominate one teacher for the award each year. The same candidate cannot be nominated two years in succession.

The Southern Region of the American Society for Horticultural Science plans to present the first award in 1958. A regional committee will select the winner from among the nominees of the schools of agriculture. Among points to be considered in selecting nominees and the winner will be superior teaching in the classroom, personal contact with students, and success in developing good students and successful career men.

A native of Marshallville, Ga., Professor Ware came to Auburn as a student in horticulture in 1913. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Auburn and as a young man operated a peach farm in Georgia. Later he joined the horticultural staff of the API School of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station and became head of the horticulture department in 1931.

L. M. WARE ... for good teaching

Ware has conducted pioneer research studies on irrigation of vegetables in the South. He also has carried out extensive vegetable fertilization studies. For many years, he was interested in forestry research and teaching and in the early 1940's led a successful drive to organize a forestry department in the API School of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station.

Stalwart Auburn Supporter—

Sheldon Lyne Toomer, '93, Dies

Sheldon Lyne Toomer, '93, pioneer Auburn citizen and stalwart supporter of API, died at his home in Auburn on September 27, 1957, after a lengthy illness. Commenting editorially on Mr. Toomer's death, The Lee County Bulletin said, "In the death last Friday night of Sheldon L. (Shell) Toomer, an era in the life and affairs of Auburn came to an end. He was the last of the 'old crowd' which largely built and directed the business, civic, educational, and church community that is Auburn today." In 1948 the Alumnews in reviewing the long and fruitful life of Mr. Toomer said, "Sheldon Toomer's life has been so closely interwoven with the history of Auburn that he may well be called the Guardian of Alabama Polytechnic Institute."

As the Lee County Bulletin further stated, no eulogy can improve upon the record of Mr. Toomer's life, but Auburn will miss him, and "It is fortunate for Auburn that he lived and worked here. His contributions helped put together the solid rock foundation on which this educational center today is emerging as one of the stoutest, strongest communities anywhere."

Mr. Toomer, widely connected in business, political, social and church affairs of Auburn, organized and gave his name to several of the town's oldest business establishments. "Toomer's Corner," a familiar landmark to three generations of Auburn students, got its name from him, as did Toomer's Drug Store and Toomer's Hardware.

In addition, Mr. Toomer helped organize the Bank of Auburn and served as its president nearly 50 years before becoming chairman of the board a year ago. He also was president of Auburn Ice and Coal Co.

Mr. Toomer held large farming interests. Since selling his drug store and hardware several years ago, he had devoted the major portion of his time and interests to his farm.

He became a member of the Auburn City Council in 1898 and served in that capacity for 24 years. For many years he was chairman of the old city board of education.

A charter member of the Villagers Club, which later became Auburn Rotary Club, Mr. Toomer served it and Rotary as president.

He also had served as president of Alabama Pharmaceutical Association, of Ogletree Outing Club, Auburn Chamber of Commerce, and Auburn Golf Club, which now is Saugahatchee Country Club.

Mr. Toomer was a member of Alpha Tau Omega, social fraternity and Rho Chi, national honorary pharmaceutical fraternity.

A life-long Episcopalian, Mr. Toomer served as vestryman of the Church of the Holy Innocents for 30 years. He was a member of the building committee which had charge of building the present church sanctuary.

Mr. Toomer, as his father before him, served Lee County in the State Legislature. (His father was Lee County's first representative in the House after Lee was carved out of Macon County soon after the Civil War).

Mr. Toomer served in the House in administrations of Gov. Bibb Graves and Gov. Frank Dixon.

Later, during the administration of Chauncey Sparks, he served the Lee-Russell district in the State Senate.

It was in the Dixon administration (in 1941) that Mr. Toomer was named to the API board of trustees, and he served for 12 years in that capacity. On the board, he was a member of the budget committee and upon the death of President L. N. Duncan he was named chairman of a board committee to recommend appointment of a new API president.

Of his appointment as trustee, The Montgomery Advertiser said: "Toomer is one of those dyed-in-the-wool Auburn devotees to whom loyalty to Auburn is almost a religion."

Born in the shadow of the college, at Opelika on July 14, 1872, Mr. Toomer moved to Auburn in the 1870's following his father's death. He was the son of Sheldon Toomer, Opelika lawyer and captain in the Confederate army, and Wilhelmina Lyne Toomer, daughter of William Bullock Lyne, captain, U. S. Army.

His father in 1871 introduced the bill in the Legislature which created the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Auburn as the successor of the old East Alabama Male College.

In college here Mr. Toomer was a right halfback on Auburn's first football team in 1892. Upon graduating in chemistry and agriculture in 1893, he went to Texas A. & M. and taught there the next three years.

SHELDON LYNE TOOMER

Mr. Toomer returned to Auburn to study pharmacy and he started a drug store in 1896.

He married Marguerite Prendergast, daughter of Maj. E. Ross Prendergast, of Montreal, Canada, in 1919. Mrs. Toomer died in May, 1956.

They were the parents of two children, who survive: Sheldon Lyne Toomer, Jr., '43, of New York City, and Mrs. John Hall, (Margaret Frances Toomer, '45), of Atlanta, Ga. Other survivors include Sheldon Hall and Margaret Hall, grandchildren.

In his three terms in the State Legislature, Mr. Toomer primarily was interested in education and natural resources. He sponsored much legislation which bears his name. One of the bills assured Federal aid for Alabama forestry.

Col. L. E. Funchess, '35, Succeeds Brewster

Col. Linwood E. Funchess, '35, has succeeded Sam F. Brewster as director of Buildings and Grounds at API. Assuming his new duties the first of October, Col. Funchess already has found enough time to familiarize himself with his new job and to analyze chief objectives and responsibilities.

COL. LINWOOD E. FUNCHESS

Col. Funchess has found, happily, that the responsibilities of the director of Buildings and Grounds is almost identical with a job that he had in service as post engineer. He expresses gratification for the excellent organization which Mr. Brewster left in the department.

Commenting upon the task ahead of him, Col. Funchess notes that he, like others, looks forward with anticipation to the continued expansion of the college's physical plant, but that maintenance of the present grounds and buildings is also a matter of major concern for him. The average person may take maintenance for granted, but the tremendous expansion of the physical plant since 1945 makes maintenance a big item in Buildings and Grounds planning and a matter of major importance to API.

In appointing Colonel Funchess, President Ralph B. Draughon praised him highly upon his engineering and military accomplishments since he graduated as an honor student in aeronautical engineering at Auburn in 1935.

Before retirement in July this year,

Colonel Funchess served 20 years as a regular Army officer. He spent one year as Soil Conservation Service engineer; one year as deputy district engineer of the U. S. Army, Tulsa, Okla.; one year as inspector and project engineer at Ft. Gibson Dam, Okla.; two years as instructor in Engineering Construction, Ft. Belvoir, Va.; one year with the C. O. Engineering Construction Group in Korea; two years as post engineer at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., and two years as engineer advisor, Ankara, Turkey.

During World War II he served as Lt. Colonel of the 385th Engineer Construction Battalion receiving the Bronze Star Medal at the end of the war. He served as Lt. Colonel with the Corps of Engineer Operations in Korea and was elevated to Colonel in 1954. He spent one year as professor of Military Science and Tactics at Rice Institute, Houston, Texas.

He was born and reared in Greenville, Ala., received his B. S. degree at Auburn in 1935, his M. S. degree in engineering at Cornell in 1939 and studied at the Engineer School at Ft. Belvoir, Virginia in 1940.

While a student at Auburn he was alternate captain of Cross Country and Track, secretary and treasurer of the "A" Club and a member of the Student Government Council. He also was president of Tau Beta Pi and member of O.D.K. Spades, Scabbard and Blade, and Phi Kappa Phi.

U. S. Education And World Events

Perhaps news of recent Soviet technological advances requires some "agonizing reappraisal" of American educational, as well as U. S. political and administrative, policies. This writer proposes merely to suggest some questions on the matter, without any presumption of presenting answers.

No one appears ready to deny that Russia has gone ahead of us—for the moment at least—in preparation for intercontinental warfare and for the conquest of outer space; there may be more evidence than we choose to admit that the Communists have outstripped us for the present in ideological warfare as well. Suppose that we can shrug off all Soviet gains in "earthbound" satellites and the communization of China as "the results of intrigue and brute force," without reference to the battle of ideas. Can we dismiss India's pro-Soviet inclinations or recent developments in Syria, for example, by the same token?

One explanation, a logical one it seems, for the Russian advances in development of the intercontinental ballistic missile and the space satellite is that Russian scientific effort has been concentrated on these problems; presumably Russian education has also been concentrated on technology—but not on technology alone or warfare alone. President Eisenhower's recent candid admission that he was hard put to defend the principles of democracy against Marshal Zhukov (in a friendly argument in Germany after World War II) evidences that Russians are well grounded in Communist ideology.

Many eyebrows lifted at the President's admission, but the question remains, "How many Americans can logically define, defend, or explain democracy clearly, concisely, and logically (to anyone other than a fellow believer in our particular version of democracy)?" Of course, we have really never felt any strong need to defend the principle of democracy—although we have fought valiantly when forced to do so to maintain our right to practice it without interference. After Thomas Jefferson's administrations, we have apparently tended more and more to accept validity of the principle as self-evident. First the protective wall of oceans around us and then the confidence in our industrial power have enabled us to remain relatively free from serious entanglement in world affairs until recent times. This security number at API exceeds a reasonable expectation, despite the fact that the college offers guidance service in addition to remedial courses to assist students with academic problems (and further assistance is offered—as standard procedure in many departments—through numerous individual student-instructor conferences).

Auburn continues to work on this problem for which no one has a pat solution. But one question that is often raised by some officials intimately involved with it is this: "Are many students now suffering from educational neglect from the first grade through college because the growing influx of students has too often forced and/or beguiled educators and the public into consideration of the mass instead of the individual needs?"

JIM WATSON SPONSORS FOOTBALL WARM-UP

Watson's TV Center in Birmingham, owned by Jim Watson, '50, is sponsoring the fifteen minute football pre-game 'warm-up' and the 'Score Board' fifteen minutes after all Auburn games which will be on WAPI.

—plus a number of other factors—has permitted us to concentrate on improving living standards at home and to develop our somewhat unique American way of living and thinking.

The American Way is, of course, an omnibus term, subject to varying definitions and considerable controversy (but largely controversy for domestic political purpose). Regardless of diverse manners of definition, few Americans want to change it; the vast majority will if necessary fight to preserve it. But the nation directed from the Kremlin has crystallized the question of whether our willingness for physical combat and our industrial might and spectacular advances in applied science are enough.

Do recent events not clearly show that we must henceforth forego our normal public inclination toward complacency in regard to world affairs? Will such change not require some reorientation in our educational philosophy and policies?

To reiterate, the Alumnews does not presume to answer these questions, but a recapitulation and the addition of a few facts are needed to raise one more unanswered question. The course of events in American development has allowed—perhaps even forced—us to be a practical nation. We have as a result excelled in applied science—in industrial development—and in achieving an unequalled general standard of living. Our educational system has been oriented in the direction of our development—it has been streamlined, standardized, and systematized. It has produced many excellent results, but from it we have produced little in pure, or basic, science or scientific research (our scientists have brilliantly applied the discoveries of European scientists). From it we have apparently produced relatively few men who understand democracy in the context of world history, or contemporary world affairs.

The final question then is whether we do not need to consider development of an academic program and atmosphere which will encourage projection of the American genius into pure science, into the study of history and world culture, so that we can stay abreast of other nations in scientific development and fight the ideological battles with the calmness and assurance which only culture—aside from abiding religious faith—can give?

More Good Tigers Coming Up

"This freshman team could be as good potentially as any group we've had," Coach Dick McGowen said after his freshman football team defeated the Florida Gators, 19-0.

The Baby Tigers rolled up 295 yards rushing and 29 yards passing as they defeated the Baby Gators for the first time ever.

Quarterback Don Fuell, 6-3, 190-pounder from Guntersville, led the victory. Versatile Don ran 10 times for 83 yards and completed five of eight passes for 29 yards and one touchdown.

Righthalf Wayne Proffitt of Gadsden was the second leading ground-gainer with 62 yards for 14 runs. Proffitt also caught a TD aerial from Fuell for the first score.

"Tackle Ken Rice, 240-pounder, played exceptionally well," McGowen said. "Also, you can't overlook the fine play of G. W. Clapp, Jimmy Philpott, Luddy Goetz, Bobby Hodges, and Joe Leichtnam."

"In the backfield, Fuell, Proffitt, Jimmy Pettus, Junior Thomasino, Charlie Benefield, and Ed Dyas did fine jobs," McGowen continued.

Statistically, here's the Auburn victory over Florida.

Charlie Benefield	12	32	2.7
Junior Thomasino	6	21	3.5

Florida kicked off and held on downs. Pettus punted to Florida's Jack Brazil (brother of our Roy), and Hodges tackled him, forcing a fumble which Leichtnam recovered at the Florida 40. Eight plays later, Fuell passed to Proffitt for the touchdown.

Auburn's second touchdown came in the second quarter on a 78-yard march in 12 plays. Benefield scored from the one.

The final TD came when Johnny McGeever returned a Florida punt from the 50 to Florida 20-yard line. Thomasino ran three straight plays to the one. McGeever sneaked over.

Next frosh game will be October 21 at Athens, Ga., against the Georgia frosh. The final game will be with Alabama in Auburn on Nov. 4.

Bill BECKWITH

IS THIS IT?

"War Eagle," calling card of Auburn people for years. How did it start? When was it first heard? Why the complete secrecy about the origination? These questions have bothered me since I first heard the Auburn Battle Cry.

I'm convinced I've dug up a new story, but by the same token, I'm convinced that your story about the origination has authority also. Talking with hundreds of Auburn people everywhere, I have heard many stories.

War Eagle is a yell that was revived many different times until about 30 odd years ago when it was adopted officially as the most unique yell of any college in the nation.

Here are some of the stories:

(1) It is a revival of an old battle cry of the ancient Saxons when they fought.

(2) Someone conceived the cry from the headdress of Auburn cadets when Auburn was considered a military school.

(3) It developed as the result of a farmer turning an eagle over to students back in 1930 when the national bird got caught in his pea patch.

And on and on.

CIVIL WAR ORIGIN?

It is my new belief that War Eagle was derived from the Civil War and from the Battle of Atlanta back in 1864, when an eagle swept over the battlefield following his master who was a general.

What does history report on this incident?

Well, in the Cyclorama in Grant Park in Atlanta on the majestic panel painting, which is the largest of its kind in the world, there flies an eagle.

Auburn's first football game was played in Atlanta on George Washington's birthday in Old Piedmont Park against the University of Georgia. My source says War Eagle was heard there.

It is believed that soldiers participating in the Battle of Atlanta were later to be Auburn students and alumni and that in this first big collegiate contest when the heat of the battle boiled to point of explosion, War-r-r Eagle was heard as a victory yell, or battle cry.

NO 'AUTHENTIC' STORY IS BEST!

Actually, Auburn people do not want a "this is it" story. We like the mystery and color of not being able to pin-point our nationally-known cry. This I know because of the numerous people who have written saying "don't authorize a bona fide War Eagle story—leave it for our imagination."

As I've said, War Eagle—like the Egyptian phoenix—has been reborn many times, and each time has and should make colorful history—as Auburn does daily.

So be it during this month of October in 1957.

WAR-R-R EAGLE!

WHAT OTHERS SAID ABOUT THE TIGERS

Auburn's 7-0 opening victory over Tennessee was undoubtedly the most glorified win ever recorded by the gridmen of the Plains because of the tremendous press; there was national publicity on TV, radio, magazines, and newspapers—here's what some had to say:

Tom Siler (Knoxville News-Sentinel)—"Tennessee lost one of the most one-sided 7-0 games ever played on Shields-Watkins Field."

Herman Hickman (Sports Illustrated)—"The Volunteers played one whale of a defensive game. Otherwise the score might have been embarrassing."

Raymond Johnson (Nashville Tennessean)—"They achieved the feat by stripping the Volunteers' interference, something that few teams have done since Tennessee rose to a gridiron power under Bob Neyland."

Ben Byrd (Knoxville Journal)—"Phillips went through Tennessee like a dose of milk of magnesia."

Walter Stewart (Memphis Commercial Appeal)—"To be rather brutally frank about it, it could have been a deal worse, for Tennessee's back was to the wall so often that the Ogres emerged with stylish corns on all available shoulder blades."

Benny Marshall (Birmingham News)—"But seven-to-nothing does not begin to tell the story of complete Auburn mastery on a day meant for MEN only—and Tigers."

Ed Miles (Atlanta Journal)—"The 7-0 score failed utterly to portray the vast difference in the play of the two teams. The Auburn defense kept the Vols pilloried throughout the game."

LIGHTS HAVE LONG SINCE GONE OUT on the scoreboard at Shields-Watkins Field, but this picture still tells the story (as far as the score is concerned) of one of Auburn's stimulating upset triumphs. Subsequent games by both Auburn and Tennessee may, or may not, seem to change the value of that triumph, but to the true Auburn football fan, the glory of that victory will remain sweet.

Tigers Beat Wildcats
To Keep Slate Clean

Coach "Shug" Jordan's Tigers kept their seasons record spotless by squeezing out a 6 to 0 defensive battle victory over Kentucky in Cliff Hare Stadium. Auburn turned a fumble, on the Kentucky 36 early in the third quarter, into the only tally for the game. Auburn's Fullback Billy Atkins, playing in the Kentucky backfield, deflected a Lowell Hughes pitchout and then recovered it. Hoppe and Lorino went wide for 12 and a first down. Lou Michaels threw Nix for a four yard loss; Lorino picked up six and a knockout blow that cost Kentucky 15 yards for a personal foul. Atkins went over right tackle, appeared to be stopped, but broke loose and fought across the goal line.

The end play of Auburn's Jimmy Phillips and Jerry Wilson was terrific, as was the tackle play of Kentucky's Lou Michaels. Auburn's Billy Atkins not only scored the only touchdown, but also played a crushing defense game, and punted sensationally.

AUBURN VERSUS TENNESSEE

Auburn's massive defensive line shackled Tennessee on the ground and sprung its own backs loose for repeated gains Saturday, Sept. 28 in Shields-Watkins Field, Knoxville, to defeat the Volunteers, 7-0 in an SEC football game.

The Tigers, with their line opening gaping holes in the Tennessee fore-wall, smashed 57 yards in 16 plays for its touchdown in the second period. Fullback Billy Atkins plunged over from the one and added the extra point.

That was all the scoring, but it gave no indication of the superiority of the Tigers. Auburn, smartly directed by Quarterback Lloyd Nix, threatened repeatedly and only Tennessee's fine defensive play held the score down.

The Vols' best scoring chance came midway in the first quarter when Johnson blocked Atkins' quick kick on the Auburn 17. But on the second play, Tailback Bobby Gordon fumbled and Tiger end Jimmy Phillips pounced on the ball at the 18. Phillips turned in a magnificent defensive performance.

Backfield standouts for the Tigers were Righthalf Bobby Hoppe and Atkins, who ground out 59 and 56 yards respectively, while line stars in addition to Phillips were End Jerry Wilson, Guards Zeke Smith and Tim Baker, and Center Jackie Burkett.

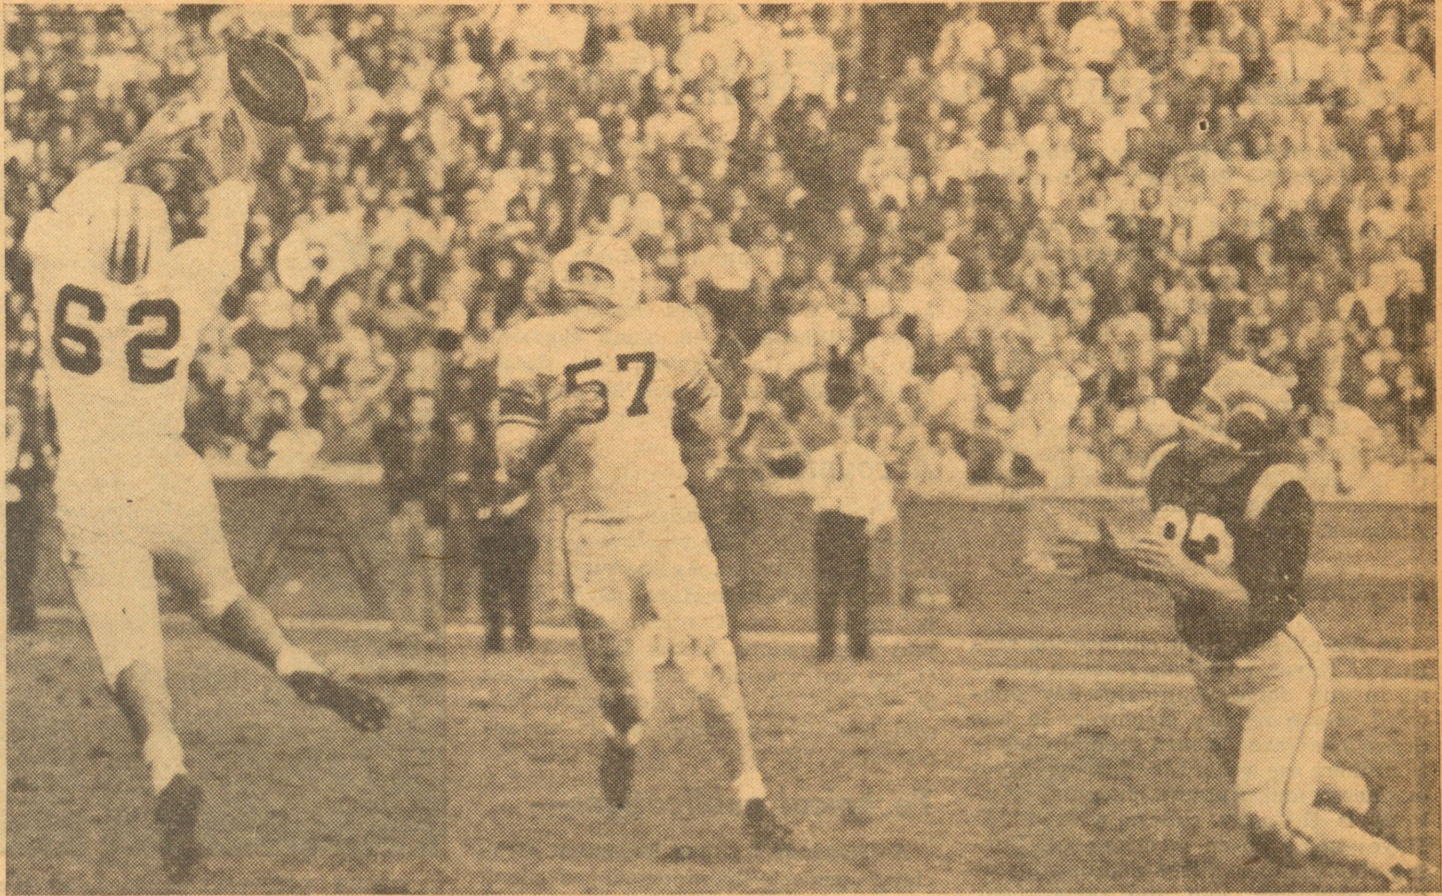

A crowd of 42,000, largest ever to see an opening game in Knoxville, saw Auburn gain a wide edge in statistics. Coach Ralph Jordan's eleven rushed the ball 207 yards to Tennessee's 79 and picked up 11 first downs to the Vols' six.

AUBURN VERSUS CHATTANOOGA

Instead of taking Chattanooga as a breather, Auburn's powerful Tigers handled them in a business-like manner, 40-7, before 17,000 fans in Cliff Hare Stadium, Auburn, Oct. 5.

Individual stars were numerous as the Tigers rolled up a real team victory with nearly every player on the team helping in the scoring of the twenty points per half. Fullback Billy Atkins was again the rushing leader with 65 yards in nine trips. Righthalf Bobby Hoppe added 45 in nine.

Quarterback Bryant Harvard was the most effective of the passers, hitting 4 of 5 for 74 yards. The soph "roll-out" artist scored the first TD from eight yards out, while End Jimmy Phillips, QB Johnny Kern, LH Pat Meagher, FB Billy Atkins, and FB Jimmy Reynolds, followed with other six-pointers.

EVERYBODY GOT IN ON THE ACTION against Chattanooga. Here reserve guard Morris Savage (number 62) tries for a Chattanooga pass with reserve center Oscar Knox (number 57) coming on to help while an unidentified Moccasin adopts a prayerful posture. Morris didn't make the interception but managed to tip the ball away to teammate Jeff Weekley who did and ran it back five yards to the Tiger 35.

Auburn Knights Plan
For Second Reunion

Among the thousands of alumni who will return to Auburn next month for Homecoming, 1957, will be members of a group which for the last 27 years has played an important part in campus life and has served as a musical ambassador for Auburn throughout the South.

Staging their second reunion will be former members of the Auburn Knights Orchestra, a band which has been composed of Auburn students since its founding in the fall of 1930. Through the years, the Knights have provided dance music and show numbers that rival big-name bands, and today's edition of the Knights is keeping the tradition alive and growing.

Always a favorite on their home campus, the Knights nevertheless have not limited their scope to Auburn, or even Alabama. Music by the Knights is in demand through a wide area, and the orchestra tries to fill the demand just as far as their bus will carry them and return home for Monday classes.

Informal gatherings of former bandmen have been a source of delight for the Knights for many years, but not until 1956 did the band hold a planned reunion for all alumni, with current members of the band also on hand. During Homecoming weekend last year, around 35 Knights representing nearly every band since the original group were present, along with their wives. Included were six of 10 members of the 1932 band—a notable symbol of the durability of the Auburn Knights spirit.

Scarcity of accommodations in Auburn on Homecoming weekend forced the band to set up reunion headquarters at a motel east of Opelika. Highlights of the weekend were a Friday night dinner and bull session which went on into the night, campus sight-seeing Saturday morning, Auburn-Mississippi State football game that afternoon, and another dinner and business meeting Saturday night. The group then returned to the campus to hear the present band play for the Homecoming dance.

At the business session the Knights agreed to make the reunion an annual affair and named Curtis Griffith general chairman for the 1957 event. Headquarters for the coming reunion will be the Ralston Hotel in nearby Columbus, Ga. Activities will get under way with a cocktail party from 5 to 7 p. m. followed by dinner Friday, Nov. 1. Highlights the following day will be Auburn's football game with Florida and the Homecoming dance.

game is scheduled for Rice Stadium at 8 p. m.

George Lanier, '33, national vice-president for Texas of Auburn Alumni Association, will be on hand to help make the gathering a success.

At Hayes Aircraft—

Auburn Alumni Keep Them Flying

Sitting to the left of the automobile approach to the Birmingham Municipal Airport are the "10 aircraft plants under one roof" of the Hayes Aircraft Corp. The main building—one is told—would accommodate 27 football fields, but more significant to an Auburnite is that all of the buildings occupied by Hayes house a number of sons and daughters of Auburn during their working hours. From the front office to the flight line one can find an Auburn man or woman in the thick of the activity which has given Hayes the second largest industrial payroll in Alabama.

Engineering—

In the all-important engineering section of Hayes, one finds Auburn alumni in full force. Approximately one-third of the regular employees in this department are Auburn men. In addition, there are a number of co-op Hayes engineers and Auburn students. Auburn is the only college with which Hayes has a co-op arrangement. During the summer thirty additional student engineers join the department; this group does summer work only and is not counted part of the alternating quarter co-op program.

The story of Hayes may be told through the story of men like Charles Douglas (Charlie) Brown, '43. Charlie, a native of Selma, came with Hayes when it was organized in 1951. Prior to that he spent eight years with Pan American Airways in Miami, Fla. Charlie has been assistant project engineer for the conversion of B-50 bombers into three point refueling tankers for the Tactical Air Command. He now heads a second program of augmentation of jet engines with conventional aircraft engines on the KB-50J.

After Charlie's crews and manufacturing personnel have finished, the once obsolete B-50 is ready to feed in flight three hungry jets and thus repay in service the millions of dollars of tax money that went into its original construction. Charlie and Hayes foresee a continuation of this type of unique work for an aircraft corporation. As long as there is progress in aircraft development, many expensive planes will become obsolete; these can be converted to other useful purposes for a fraction of the original cost by alert designers, engineers and modification crews.

Auburn Engineers

Other Auburn men in Hayes engineering department are: W. E. (Ed) Addison, '49, design engineer; Chadwick M. Baker, Jr., administrative assistant, KB-50; Frank S. Boardman, '48, stress engineer; Robert S. Brown, '40, assistant group engineer; James H. Bugg, stress engineer; Glenn F. Bynum, stress engineer; James K. Christian, design engineer; Sam S. Covington, Jr., design engineer; Thomas O. Crutchfield, Jr., design engineer; Kyle W. DeShazo, draftsman; Benjamin J. Dryer, '46, technician; Walter K. Dunwody, Jr., design engineer; Glenn H. Fancher, Jr., draftsman; Troyce M. Feltman, draftsman; N. R. Fourroux, design engineer; Hugh C. Gayler, '43, design engineer; Thomas G. Groover, '54, engineer in stress department.

B. M. Inzer, technician; Thomas D. Griffin, liaison; Sam M. Hazelrig, Jr., '54, design engineer; Robert W. Henry, '50, aero engineer; William L. Henry, '42, design engineer; Robert L. Hilyer, reproduction apprentice; George Mallory, technician; Lyman H. Mason, '49, design engineer; Milan B. Morrow, '56, stress engineer; Jack O. McAlister, Sr., liaison; Alex F. McKenzie, Jr., '40, liaison; Larry R. McNaron, '43, assistant group engineer; William D. Orders, Jr., design engineer; William F. Patterson, '48, design engineer; W. V. Pattillo, liaison; Searcy S. Penuel, '44, assistant group engineer; Robert F. Phillips, stress engineer.

Morris A. Reynolds, '56, stress engineer; Harold L. Richards, technician; Wilson Roby, Jr., '50, design engineer; Jack N. Roden, '53, stress engineer; Charles T. Scott, administrative assistant to a project engineer; William A. Shoemaker, draftsman; James T. Sleeman, liaison.

Ernest P. Thompson, '52, design engineer; Adrian P. Tucker, '51, design engineer; Albert L. Tuggle, assistant group engineer; Hubbard A. Tynes, '54, design engineer; James O. Welch, design engineer; Robert J. West, technician; Lewis F. White, design engineer; Wallace G. Whitfield, '49, chief, electrical lab; Emmet C. Wiginton, '50, design engineer; John A. Wilson, '28, engineer, planning.

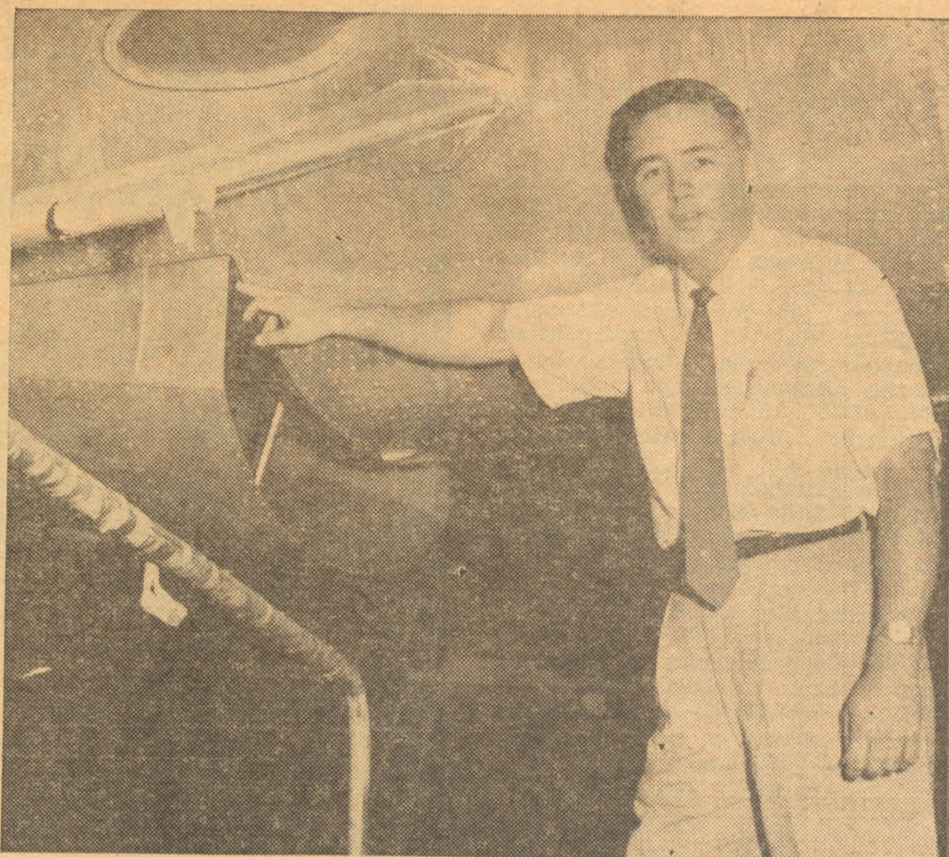

Accounting—

A multi-million dollar business and approximately 8,000 employees require a lot of accounting. Again Auburn men are on the job with Hayes. C. W. Wells is manager of Contract Close-Outs and Terminations. Lamar Edwards, '50, is tax and specialty accountant. James T. Walley, '53, is an accountant, "A", and Harold Ed. Trigg, '55, is an accountant, "B."

Technical publications—

As Hayes has grown important associated projects have developed along with advances in aircraft conversion. Among the most important of these is a Technical Publications Department. Auburn's Jack Turner, '47, is Chief of Research and Writing in Technical Publications. Among the 110 men working in Jack's division are F. J. Breck, '52; Tom L. Guyer, '50; Fred Hodges, '51;

CHARLIE BROWN, '43 discusses the problem involved in conversion of the old tail gunner's position to a refueling reel housing in the KB-50. Conversion of the tail created aerodynamic problems that could not be solved in a wind-tunnel, but required engineering know-how, modification, testing, and further modification. The other two refueling reels are located in pods on the wings. Bomb bays have been converted to reservoirs of jet fuel with fuel tanks hanging where the block-busters once hung. Charlie and his fellow workers are now engaged in further converting the KB-50's to KB-50-J's by adding a jet engine on each wing.

SOMEONE SAID 'WAR EAGLE' and the photographer snapped before Godfrey Bennett, Jr., '52, Hayes' Engineering Personnel Coordinator, and Secretary Anne Poarch Brown, '54, could get back to the business at hand. As Engineering Personnel Coordinator, Godfrey likes to see good engineers come to Hayes, and as a loyal son of the Plains, he is particularly proud of the Auburn engineers with Hayes. He was in Auburn Oct. 15 looking for more good prospective Auburn engineers to work with his firm.

JAMES PEVEY THOMAS, '39, Superintendent of the Flight Line at Hayes, and his general foreman of the KB-50 Flight Line, Morris Jones, check the condition of an un-cowled engine to be sure that there is no need for an engine change. Thomas and his assistants take planes when they come from the bay, clean them, clear up minor defects and discrepancies, ground test them, and prepare them for test flight by company pilots. After discrepancies, if any, have been fixed as a result of that flight, the planes are turned over to the Air Force.

AUBURN CO-OPS ON THE JOB—Paul Dover, junior in Electrical Engineering at API, gives pointers in drafting an instrument panel design to James Heatherly, third-quarter API freshman in Aeronautical Engineering. Both men are working and studying on the Auburn-Hayes co-operative plan.

Auburn Alumni Keep Them Flying At Hayes

SAM STRICKLAND, '56, (right) and Carl Colley, '57, talk over the report after a flight to check carburetor icing in a converted B-25. Conversion of moth-balled B-25's to trainers was an initial project for Hayes. Carburetor icing in rainy weather has been a problem for Hayes engineers to solve in the converted B-25. To be sure that it is solved, men like Sam and Carl go up in the experimental plane which is flown behind a B-29 with a boom-type spray in the tail. The spray shoots thousands of gallons of water into the engines of the B-25. Sam Strickland, who is a liaison engineer for Hayes, came to Auburn for a degree in Industrial Management after retiring as a flight engineer with the rank of major in the Air Force's B-36. At Auburn he roomed across the hall from his son, Sam M. Strickland, who is a 1957 Science and Literature (major in mathematics) API graduate. Since this picture was made for the ALUMNEWS, Carl Colley has returned to Auburn as an instructor in mechanical engineering.

C. B. Munroe, '54; R. L. Popwell, '51; and N. H. Stewart, '43. Technical publications range from writing process manuals for armed services and industry to making stock catalogues for all aircraft. Included in recent projects was technical material processing for the Army's Jupiter Missile.

Manufacturing and Historical Records—After all the designing and testing is done, there remains the task of production—John R. Guy, '56, represents Auburn in Hayes' Manufacturing Department.

An operation of the magnitude that Hayes carries out has an important history—and in its own way makes history. Morgan V. Cantrell, '56, helps keep that history, for he works in Hayes' Historical records section.

JACK TURNER, '47, Chief of Research and Writing in Hayes' Technical Publications, checks through the work of his staff which numbers approximately 110. Jack's department does everything from stock catalogues to process manuals.

SUB-CRITICAL REACTOR OPEN HOUSE PLANNED

Dr. Howard Carr, '36, Head of the API Physics Department, has announced an open house for Auburn alumni who wish to inspect Auburn's new sub-critical reactor at Homecoming on Nov. 2. Dr. Walter Connolly, who is in charge of reactor work for the department, will be on hand with two graduate student assistants from 9-12 a. m. to explain operation of the reactor, its importance to Auburn, and to answer any questions that alumni wish to ask.

Included in the demonstration is newly acquired electronics equipment which the Atomic Energy Commission has made available for advanced laboratory work.

The Auburn Alumni Association made a substantial grant to the Physics Department which made possible the installation of the sub-critical reactor. The reactor was installed and put in operation this past summer.

Student Compositions Presented

The Alumnews presents below the first in a series of compositions written by freshmen college students. Each selection appearing in this series will be chosen for its poor qualities of composition; we choose to call them "Pathetic Examples of Unpreparedness."

Before beginning this series, the editor of the Alumnews has seriously questioned the propriety and good taste of such a presentation. The urgency of student problems in communication, expression, or organization of thoughts has prompted him to lay aside any qualms. There is evidence of growing concern over the inability of many present-day students to write a comprehensible statement of their own opinions, thoughts, or experiences. The concern is registered from such diverse sources as big corporations, such as General Electric, and hard-working mothers and fathers with junior high school educations who can detect numerous disturbing flaws in the reading and writing of their college-going sons and daughters.

The compositions printed in this series will be drawn from freshman writing done at various colleges in the South including Auburn (The only reason for omitting colleges from other sections is that the Alumnews does not have enough contacts outside this area to make inclusion of other sections feasible). The compositions used were produced with a minimum of fifty minutes writing time.

Publication of the ensuing series of compositions indicates, if nothing else, that there is reason for concern. At the present moment the Alumnews is inclined to attribute the lack of mastery of language chiefly to overcrowded—and thus under-taught—elementary and secondary school classes, to a certain general abdication of parental responsibility in the matter of supervising homework, and to a too prevalent student inclination (probably contracted from us adults) to do as little as possible to "get by." Others may justifiably have different conclusions; however, the problem evidenced below speaks for itself:

THE VALUE OF A HOBBY

Tactical Air Command's 19th Air Force, has assumed duties in Trier, Germany, as Fourth Allied Tactical Air Force deputy chief of staff for operations, one of the top positions in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization command. He succeeds Colonel William R. Nevitt, who was reassigned to the U. S. upon completion of a normal overseas tour.

Headquarters and command operations functions under the deputy chief of staff for Operations Spearhead—4th ATAF's peacetime mission for assuring operational coordination of its U. S. French and Canadian tactical units, and for providing for wartime missions.

A rated command pilot, he wears the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit, and the Air Medal, awarded him for World War II exploits as a combat command of tactical air units in the European Theatre of Operations.

In addition to many command positions held during his career, Col. Dyas has had several outstanding staff assignments, including membership on a board formed by the late General H. H. Arnold that established tactical reconnaissance organization and concepts used in the USAF today; participation in the first post-war atomic bomb test as a member of Joint Task Force I; and services as Air Force advisor to the government of Peru from 1948 to 1950.
